Program Summary

Dear Colleagues:

Onslaught of claims due to a rogue tornado? Winged monkeys got you down?

You don't need a crystal ball – we've got you covered. Leave those dreary gray winter skies behind. Follow the yellow brick road to the warm, technicolor beaches of sunny Fort Myers-Sanibel-Captiva, Florida. Join us for our 2018 Mid-Winter Program - "Subcontractors, Subconsultants, Suppliers – Oh My! ... We Aren't in Kansas Anymore", a unique journey over the rainbow to the world of subcontractors, subconsultants and suppliers from the perspective of all project participants.

Our thought leaders in construction law and practice will present a broad range of topics including these:

- Subcontractor liability for design;
- Managing the risk of non-performance during construction, and securing that risk through traditional bonding or subcontractor default insurance;
- Securing payment and available remedies under state and federal law;
- Overcoming or enforcing contract language relating to damages, including no-damages-for-delay, liquidated damages, and waivers of consequential damages;
- "Pass-through" claims: successful positioning, False Claims Act considerations, and avoiding the "winged monkey in the middle" position; and,
- Ethical issues in bidding and in contracting with M/W/DBEs.

Who should attend and why?

- Litigators and Advocates - No matter who your clients are, you will gain a broader understanding of the unique and complicated rights, duties, risks, and remedies involved in representing subcontractors, subconsultants, and suppliers on small and large projects alike. Attendees who represent owners and general contractors will gain insight into the unique risks involved in procuring and managing subcontractors, subconsultants, and suppliers from procurement through construction and warranty periods. Counsel will obtain critical understanding of a lower-tier's need to insulate itself from risk and achieve timely payment, as well as claims-avoidance strategies owners and general contractors may employ to share or push risk down to subcontractors, subconsultants, and suppliers.
- Transactional and In-House Attorneys - Learn about risk assessment and insurance, contract drafting pitfalls and negotiation strategies, requirements for documenting and releasing claims on troubled projects, and ethical considerations in bidding and presenting payment claims.
- New Construction Lawyers - This conference will provide you with a broader understanding of all aspects of construction law. Attend the practicum on Wednesday, January 17, and learn more about preparing and presenting your construction cases. As construction trial lawyers, we must distill technical and complex matters and present them in easily understood and relatable concepts. While we develop the case, we must also navigate the evidentiary and presentation issues that, as trial lawyers, routinely confront us. The practicum focuses on utilizing the fundamental building blocks to build your construction case whether prosecuting or defending one.

Don't miss your time in the sun to build your professional skills, collaborate with thought leaders in the construction industry, and enjoy a multitude of networking opportunities with other industry professionals and enjoy some time to relax in the sun.

The Panel will address certifying subcontractor pass-through claims on public projects, potential pitfalls, and how to avoid liability under the False Claims Act and similar statutes. The Panel will close with a debate: When facing a complex dispute, who should the contractor settle with first? The owner? Or, the subcontractor?

10:00 A.M. – 11:00 A.M. But Is It Positively, Absolutely, Undeniably, and Reliably Dead? Warranties, Guarantees, Decennial Liability, and Statutes of Limitation & Repose

How do traditional subcontractor-provided warranties and guarantees affect ongoing obligations or future liability? This session will discuss the pass-through of warranties and guarantees from subcontractor to contractor to owner, and whether the contractor is absolved of further liability for the work to which the warranty or guarantee applies. The Panel will also address statutes of limitation and repose. Do these statutes have teeth or does the judicial application of these statutes tell a different story – one where the subcontractor remains liable in near perpetuity due to contractual indemnity obligations, or through nullum tempus laws exempting claims by certain governmental entities in those jurisdictions from statutes of limitation or repose.
